Ambition and Aspiration for all

Famous figures who shaped PSHE		Because I love PSHE, when I am older, I could be…
	Sir Edwin Chadwick – he lived a long time ago and worked hard to help make towns cleaner and healthier. His ideas also helped schools teach children how to stay clean and healthy.	A social worker - a helper who protects children and families when they are going through tough times. They make sure everyone has a safe home, enough food to eat, and people to care for them. A healthcare worker – a healthcare assistant is a friendly medical helper who works with doctors and nurses to make sure people in the hospital or clinic are comfortable, safe, and happy. A police officer - A police officer keeps people safe, stops crimes, and enforces the law. They answer emergency calls, help people in trouble, and arrest individuals who do not uphold the law.
	Richard Titmuss - studied how people could help each other and make life fairer. His ideas helped schools teach children about caring for others, sharing responsibility and being part of a community.
	David Olusoga - a British-Nigerian historian who adapts British history for children to explore anti-racism, black identity, and inclusive communities.
	Malala Yousafzai - stood up for every child's right to go to school. Her story links to PSHE because it teaches children about courage, fairness, respecting others and speaking up for what is right.
